

Panthers at the Olympics

Now it's very easy to criticise the performance of the Australian Olympic team for their sub-par performance. However we at the gazette do not believe it was all doom and gloom and that there is a group of untapped talent that should be considered at Rio in 2016

Diving - 10m Platform

Dennis Diapolo

Dennis is a seasoned professional, learning his craft on the 10m board at Balwyn. Many consider Dennis a traditionalist opting to be bottomless when diving like the "Athians of old".

Fencing

Marcus Hyde

Datto is still in disbelief about Hydeys skills with a sharp piece of steel after knifing him from the ones captaincy. Clear winner in this event

Willie McKenzie

Stole a premiership medallion from underdog Anthony Schaeppman by knifing him on the eve of the finals. Worthy Silver medalist

Fans Nomination - Doug Potts

You're not a panther if you didn't want to see Dougy full of holes from a sword

Sailing

Dave Beattie

Long time sailing and sweater vest enthusiast, has already scheduled the ones team building exercise for the ones players to be his crew whilst sailing around the bay with Caroline on a romantic date.

NICKNAME WATCH

Matthew Gurney - Juddy

Gurneys ability to poll votes club champion votes (even in games he didn't play) is Juddesq

Geoff Allen - Triple M

Embroiled in a dubious incident recently when ordering a round of these.

Dougie Potts - DD

Now he's 18 he will be offering designated driver services.... if you dare.

Darren Ward - Judas

Has recently moved to a house in the enemy territory (Deepdene)

Simon Kann - The Don

Was floated last year for being the leader of the off field mafia, its more relevant now that he's the chairman of selectors

Andrew Prentice - Shotgun

Refer to Panther website

Retired Nicknames

Marcus Hyde - Mr Macgibbon

Simon Datson - Captain Grumpy

Equestrian

C.K.Prowse

Classy Chris has spent many a summer in the yarra valley practicing this very underated sport.

Beach Volleyball

PC & Poppo

PC is always dressed for a quick game of volley, coupled with the amount of time these two spend at beaches in Thailand

Weightlifting

David Speed

His nickname isn't Ant for no reason. Has shown he is incredibly strong for someone so nimble

Rythmic Gymnastics

Andrew Minnicello

Unfortunately missed his chance to be Australias next triple threat on channel 10s I will survive. Decided to use his dancing skills to concentrate on this event

Synchronized Swimming

Matthew Gurney & Anthony Schaeppman

They were attracted to this event as they would finally have an excuse to was their chests and wear speedos. Massive Flogs

Athletics

100m Sprint

Dave Eva

Has perfected the art of sprinting away post game to avoid having a beer with his team mates

Note: Datto has suggested himself for this event

5000m

Dale Rogers

Is built like a Kenyan distance runner would not be out of place in the final of this event.

Grecco Roman Wrestling

Lawrance Lathouras

This firey greek has a proven himself in the Panther end of season trip by putting speedys head through a window, along with

Event we'd like to see at Rio

Hotdog Eating Contest

Michael Spetsiotis

Could represent either Australia or Greece. This Greek marvel is noted for his superhuman ability to eat more food then man should.

NBCCC Committee gives Panther players a turbo speed advantage with high-tech Bowling suit

By Antonio Bitterman

Members of the NBCCC will have a technical advantage over their toughest rivals thanks to Sean Marshal and his new speed creation.

Thanks to a high-tech bowling suit that takes inspiration from a golf ball. Latex Pty Ltd - who sponsor many elite teams – in partnership with Mr Marshal have unveiled the Anti Chafing Turbo Speed suit, which they claim can knock 0.23 seconds off a standard 10 metre run up and increase bowling speed by 1.25kmph. Meaning that if opening bowler David Beattie was to wear a suit he could indeed reach speeds of almost 65KMPH at full pace, which many, including himself thought was impossible.

Sean Marshals latest speed suit is inspired by the aerodynamic excellence of the golf ball and is the complete opposite of his previous design failure which was inspired by M Gurneys head that acted as a wind drag and resembled the likes of a parachute effect. However, without trial and error the suit would not be what it is today. No longer will 90% of NBCCC members have to suffer from severe chafing as this new suit is designed to eliminate that completely and add speed to every movement.

The kit's color design and skin tightness is similar looking to body paint and some experts believe that it is indeed true. The suit was tested during hundreds of hours in solitary confinement at a monastery in the highlands. The most challenging question Sean had was "Does my bum look big in this latex suit but little did Sean know that the Monks were sworn to silence"

Sean Marshall - Testing revolutionary suit for chaffage

Star athletes already using suit

Now Seans Eco-friendly associate and NBCCC captain David Beattie was amazed by the suit and had nothing but praise for its going green style: The suit is made from 82 per cent recycled polyester fabric, a material that uses around 13 recycled plastic bottles per outfit, which in return saves 22 dolphins, creates less carbon emissions and most importantly saves trees which makes Dave Beattie a very happy man.

The Suit has already been worn by several NBCCC players and some international stars. Including Kevin Baker, who had great difficulty in getting the suit over his head. However, now that it's on he has no choice but to wear it permanently or get it surgically removed. Kevin has worn the suit for 3 months straight and does not intend to have it removed.

Other stars included Jnr Miles, David Speed, James Gradey, Matthew Knott and Shoaib Aktar who although bowled extremely fast in the suit had a horrific reaction to the latex and his genital warts flared up. Therefore new NBCCC player Nick Brown is not allowed to wear one for that very reason. The suit has been much liked by all those who have dared to wear it and the results have been fantastic.

The suits will be distributed to all NBCCC players at the commencement of the season once the color scheme has been determined as Marcus Hyde and Lawrence Lathouras can't decide on either maroon with a salmon stripe or Maroon with an aqua V.

Supercoach Watch

With another supercoach season wrapping up, congratulation must go to Sean Marshall for winning the weekly $1000 prize last week.

4 left in the comp with Speedy, Mort, Shapes and the underdog Gallichio who will win?

Please forward all applications for next season to my secretary Antonio Bitterman

New Segment The Marcellin List - As most would recognise a large number of panthers are Marcellin alumni, due to popular demand the gazette will be comparing their unique characteristics throughout the year with each other

"Most Likely to buy you a beer"

- 1) Scott Pennell - Stupidly generous at shouting, this nightowl is best known for his catch cry "ohh skittley"
- 2) Dave Beattie - Whilst he doesn't like talking to players from lower grades he does buy them a beer if they have had a good day in the field
- 3) Cameron Dickson - Despite popular opinion, is pretty generous when buying a beer
- 4) Lawrence Lathouras - Was a lot more generous prior to being a home owner and engaged however he has the runs on the board.
- 5) Michael McLnerney - The list is getting very skinny, this high on the list purely because there are bigger tight a$$es.
- 6) Matthew Gurney - Was quoted in forbes as saying you dont become a millionaire before 30 by buying mates a drink.
- 7) Justin Cheeseright - Believes a shout is where people buy Cheesey a beer. Reciprocation is not in young Justins vocabulary
- 8) Sean Marshall - Won $1,000 on supercoach this year, was asked if he would shout a round "Dreaming" was his response (Note very generous if your name is Brendan McArdle)
- 9) Anthony Schaeppman - There are more premiership players in the threes then blokes shapes has bought a beer for
